

ADVERTISEMENT

Ryuho Okawa Argues

This Is America's Last Opportunity to Rebalance World Powers

Global Visionary and international best-selling author

RYUHO OKAWA

The 2016 United States Presidential Election shocked the world. American politicians, pollsters, international media, world leaders and layman from all political affiliations never expected a political novice to handily defeat a roster of career politicians in the primaries and then shut down the hopes of Hillary Clinton becoming the first female U.S. President.

But one individual who was not surprised was Ryuho Okawa, the Global Visionary, renowned spiritual leader and best-selling author. As early as January 5, 2016, Okawa had foreseen and predicted these results speaking publicly about his vision that Donald Trump would win the U.S. election with a non traditional populist plan, thereby defeating two American political dynasties.

Okawa Predicted The 2016 US Presidential Election ***

Now in The Trump Secret: Seeing Through the Past, Present, and Future of the New American President, Okawa, the founder of the Happy Science movement, shows Trump's creative path to the Presidency and forecasts how he will approach unifying America, strengthening a fragile world economy, and interacting with friends and adversaries alike, and how he will utilize a unique style not seen since the days of George Washington.

Ryuho Okawa has been observing U.S. politics, its economy, and its changing posture internationally since the mid 1980s when he worked on Wall Street. While he is a religious leader, he has been making his opinion clear in fields beyond religious matters— international politics, economics, education, science, and more. He has delivered more than 2,500 lectures, written over 2,100 books and is having an impact on a worldwide level, both through live broadcasts and TV programs, in addition to publication of his translated books including The Laws of Justice. Okawa has consistently criticized Obama for abdicating the U.S. role as the world's policeman and opening up vacuums in the Middle East that were filled by the ISIS and Russia, allowing North Korea to further develop nuclear weapons and the Chinese to consolidate economic and military power. In 2016, Okawa appeared on TV Sunday mornings in New York City and in The National Review, The Weekly Standard, and The Economist. In addition to predicting the 2016 American election months in advance, he also predicted in 1990 England's exit from the EU and in 2014 how the South Korean people would take action against their President.

Not to Be the Divided States of America ***

Chapter 1 features Okawa's speech the day after the American election. He forecasted what will happen including the end of the Middle East conflict, economic strategies the U.S. will wage against China, Trump's plans to address illegal immigration and terrorism, and tax policies. Calling Trump's mouth "the new weapon for a new age," Okawa acknowledged that it can sound "radical and extreme," but it's time "America should be strong." He argues that this is America's last opportunity to rebalance world powers predicting Trump will rebuild the American economy and have hegemony in foreign affairs forecasting that "the relationship between Putin and Trump will change the relationship between China and Japan, China and Russia, and China and North Korea."

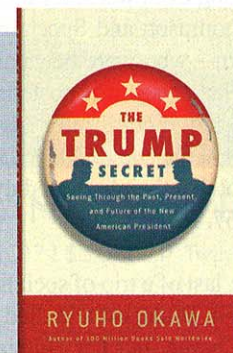

Chapter 2 is based on Okawa's empowering message to the people of the United States in New York on October 2, 2016. After viewing the city, Okawa commented how he saw a lack of vitality. He called on the United States not to be "the Divided States of America. Be America the United States. Red States and Blue States should be aimed at the end to the same goal." He stated that Obama has prompted an America that "has the tendency of hating or envy for wealthy people." He warned, "If the United States of America hesitates to let people be wealthy, it will lead to the end of America." He implored Americans to think "that the citizens of the United States are not American" they "are the world citizen, the world leader."

Make America Great Again ***

Chapter 3 is based on a spiritual interview session recorded in September 2016 as Okawa speaks for George Washington and answers questions about the U.S. presidential election, an evaluation of the eight years of Obama administration, and a vision of America in the 21st century. This interview shows that Trump's radical statements are reminiscent of George Washington.

Chapter 4 unveils Donald Trump's subconscious thoughts about various issues including illegal immigration, media's criticisms against him, Chinese expansionism, plans to "make America great again," and relations with friends and foes.

The Trump Secret: Seeing Through the Past, Present, and Future of the New American President continues to establish Okawa as an powerful thinker and teacher who views and interprets politics, international relations, and the economy from academic, practical, spiritual, and religious perspectives and has a unique ability to predict world events long before they happen.

THE TRUMP SECRET

Seeing Through
the Past, Present, and Future of the
New American
President

$14.95

ISBN 978-1-942125-22-8

Available at major bookstores nationwide

Published by IRH Press USA Inc.

HAPPY SCIENCE

www.ryuho-okawa.com